Michael Bloomberg’s $1bn gift made Johns Hopkins medical school tuition-free

Source: TOI_Top_Stories

In a groundbreaking move, Johns Hopkins University revealed a $1 billion contribution from Bloomberg Philanthropies to significantly improve financial assistance for graduate students. This generous funding extends free tuition to medical students from households earning under $300,000, while those from families with incomes up to $175,000 can access support for both tuition and living expenses.