Jeff Bezos invests $100 million to turn vacant land into parks in eight US cities

Source: TOI_Top_Stories

Jeff Bezos is allocating $100 million to convert neglected urban land into parks in eight American cities. The funding aims to revitalize vacant lots and industrial sites while enhancing community access to nature. Specific projects include restoring public spaces in Cleveland, creating parks in Indianapolis, and improving green areas in Salt Lake City. Cities such as Los Angeles and Little Rock will benefit from new recreational and gathering spaces.