

Hong Kong's $28.6bn project: Villages make way for new homes and tech city

Source: TOI_Top_Stories

Hong Kong is embarking on an ambitious project to reshape its future through the Northern Metropolis initiative. The government plans to convert various villages and wetlands into vibrant housing and technology centers, with an estimated budget of HK$224 billion. Anticipated to benefit around 2.5 million residents, this development promises to generate countless job opportunities while reinforcing ties with mainland China.